CAMPUS PROFILE:

The campus features modern classrooms and labs, as well as quiet outdoor and indoor study areas. In the Instructional Technology Center, students take advantage of the latest in educational technology. The center houses an open student computer lab, instructional television classrooms, computer and science labs, and 'smart' classrooms. A video conferencing system allows users to broadcast 'real time' meetings, seminars and classes with single or multiple sights anywhere in the world. Dedicated video conferencing rooms are also available on campus for the ENMU-Roswell Instructional Television network, which broadcasts classes to area high schools.

COLLEGE HISTORY:

Roswell Community College was officially established in 1958 with 157 part-time students attending classes at Roswell High School. In 1963, the campus moved to the old federal building and daytime courses began. The closing of Walker Air Force Base led to the designation of 241 acres of land, 27 major brick buildings and several frame buildings as the ENMU-Roswell campus in 1967. In 1982, with local bond money and state appropriations, a five year building plan began and ENMU-Roswell was able to move out of old Air Force buildings into new facilities. Through a series of statewide bond issues and local bond issues, a number of new buildings have been constructed, and other facilities renovated and expanded to meet the changing needs of the campus.
